

Teacher Name: S Pun

School: Nishkam School West London

Subject: Class Teacher

My route to teaching:

My entry into teaching has enabled me to fulfil a lifelong ambition which I had from a very early age. I thoroughly enjoyed my school days which gave me a passion to teach and instil in my students the devotion for lifelong learning. I studied History and English at university, followed by a PGCE in Primary education. I have taught across both Key Stages 1 and 2 and am currently the Humanities Co-ordinator at the Nishkam School West London.

Why I love my job:

Teaching to me is truly valuing the sense of achievement gained in teaching new skills to children. For me, the most enjoyable aspect of working in the classroom environment is that no day is ever the same: New learning taking place, fast pace, creativity, students engaged in their learning and children growing in confidence. I wanted to be able to assist and bring out the best in pupils and this has all been made possible by my career choice. I love the idea that my career path can enable me to inspire a generation and to develop young minds. In return, I have gained great job satisfaction.

Why Nishkam?

As I walked into Nishkam School for the first time, I knew this is where I wanted to teach. A calm, reflective atmosphere, the whole vision and clear direction of the school and its caring and community spirited ethos, made it clear that this was definitely the school for me. Nishkam School West London to me is like one big school family, a family that lays firm foundations in the pupils through the teaching of not only the academic but values-based education, something I firmly believe in. The school gives pupils clear direction and there is always a buzz of activity, making it a very exciting and engaging place to work.

Next steps for me:

I am excited about my journey at Nishkam, especially at this exciting and amazing new phase in its development. I look forward to fresh challenges, positivity, new ideas and enthusiasm. I am enthusiastic about working with all my pupils to enhance academic achievement, develop their social and relationship skills and enable them to achieve their personal best at our school.
